Presents the Best Reviewer for Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Quarterly (NVSQ) Award

Dr. Young-joo Lee

We are happy to express our sincere appreciation to all NVSQ reviewers. The reputation of the journal reflects the time, attention, and expertise of our reviewers. As we continue to receive expressions of gratitude from authors about the thoughtfulness, care, and value of our review process, we thank all of you who have volunteered your time to provide reviews for NVSQ and contribute to advancing the nonprofit and voluntary scholarship.

Any individual submitting a review between January 1st and December 31st, 2022 to NVSQ is automatically a candidate for the NVSQ Best Reviewer Award. Our main criteria for selecting the NVSQ Best Reviewer Award include: the quantity and quality of the reviews conducted; the timely manner in which they were completed; and the extent to which reviewers have provided constructive critiques. While being rigorous, the best reviewers are developmental in their approach and carefully review revisions to meet the high-quality standards of NVSQ.

This year, we are pleased to present the Award to Dr. Young-joo Lee of University of Central Florida.

Dr. Young-joo Lee excels in each of our criteria. She conducted a substantial number of reviews in an effective and timely manner, both in the past year and throughout her career. In particular, we value her expertise in the areas of volunteering, diversity, nonprofit governance, and community engagement. Throughout the review process, she offers timely and constructive comments, and she is always willing to review revisions to help authors improve the quality and contributions of their research.

We are grateful to Chao, Susan, and Angela for sharing reviewer data when we began our editorship that we used to invite engaged experts to our editorial team and board. We ask NVSQ board members to review at least 4 manuscripts a year. During the last year, Young-joo reviewed 8 manuscripts, with careful attention to detail and a high level of quality, helping to advance the field.

Congratulations, Young-joo, on this well-deserved award and thank you for serving on our editorial board! And many thanks to all for your support for and contributions to NVSQ.
